

Tarek El-Diwany

Tarek is Youth Underground's Contributing Researcher & Editor, making sure that the language on the website as well as in all documents and film scripts is user-friendly and easy to understand for the younger generation. He worked as an intern for "End Human Trafficking Now" in January 2013, to assist with the organization of the Chopard-sponsored "Business Leader's Award to Fight Human Trafficking", held in Davos during the World Economic Forum's Annual Meeting – principally taking care of and coordinating logistics for businesspeople attending the event, drafting press releases leading up to the event, and editing internal and external documents. He later continued as a volunteer for "Youth Against Human Trafficking" for a one-year period. Tarek earned his A-Levels from the British School in Geneva, Switzerland, following a senior education at Gordonstoun School, Scotland. He is currently taking a BA in Public Relations, UK.
